Her passion for craftwork and all form of artistic expression drives her to attend various courses in painting, drawing, mosaic and sculpture. She continued her artistic growth as a self-taught artist and with time identified a certain preference in expressing her own personal artistic form in oil painting, alongside with collage techniques and modeling of the canvas in different shapes. The canvas itself is carved enhancing structures (dimensions) and making the work itself a kind of sculpture painting. In her paintings we often also find writings, symbolisms or simple poems, which are used to strengthen the expression of her own thoughts and enhance the message that the artist wishes to convey.

Her artistic expression finds its greater expansion in creating her works by reflecting her passion for all form of spirituality. Her spiritual growth travels at the same pace with her artistic expression and with the need to blend these two dimensions. In her paintings we find mentions at earth elements, planets, symbolisms, astrology, spirituality and love. Each of her spiritual knowledge takes shape and when transferred into her paintings elevates its force and expresses its full potential. The messages that her paintings convey are drawn from our life and from the observation of the wonders of the world. They are captured in an instant and projected on to the canvas. The vibrations that emanate from them, thanks to the magic of colors, enriches the spirit and soul of the observer capturing what the artist wants to convey. The ambition of the artist is to transfer an emotion on canvas so that the observer can absorb it. In composing her work of art the artist gives great importance to the use of colors as they are perceived as carriers of energy channels that vibrate our senses moving us deeply.
